Blood Donation Camp (2014-15)

NCC Unit of the Padmashri Vikhe Patil College of Arts, Science and Commerce, Pravaranagar organized the Blood Donation Camp in collaboration with Pravara Medical Trust, Loni at 1st October 2014. In this camp Cadets of NCC Unit, Volunteers of National Service Scheme, Students, Teaching and Non-teaching staff of the college took active participation for Blood Donation. In this camp total 57 blood bags were collected from NCC cadets.

Doctors from Pravara Medical Trust, Loni told the detail information and benefits of the blood donation in the beginning of the camp. Doctor told the cadets, none may blame you for not participating in the task of completing your social responsibilities, but it is expected that everyone will contribute something towards the formation of a better society, where everyone can live peacefully and happily. Not everyone is really interested in contributing towards the creation of a better society. But there are people that have deep concerns for the overall welfare of the society. They understand the value and significance of blood donation and the importance of blood donation. They donate blood without expecting anything in return. You can see many such people around you that donate blood on a regular basis. The institutions functioning as blood banks do offer to render them some incentives, but what matters to them is the inner happiness they receive by doing the altruistic deed, like donating blood. Before you give blood, you'll first have to complete a quick physical that measures your temperature, pulse, blood pressure, and hemoglobin levels. After your blood is collected, it's sent off to a lab where it will undergo 13 different tests for infectious diseases, like HIV and West Nile virus. If anything comes back positive, you'll be notified immediately. Donating blood is one way to get a free blood test. During the donation process, people are screened to determine if they are healthy enough to give blood and if they have any blood pressure problems or infections. The blood is also tested after donation to ensure it is safe to be given to another person. After giving blood, donors can ask to be notified if there are any irregularities in their blood, which can save them a visit to the doctor's office and, perhaps, even a medical bill. A sixty-three-year-old grandmother in the United Kingdom was in the process of donating blood when the preliminary screening process detected irregularities. It turned out she had bowel cancer, which doctors detected at an early stage because of her blood screening test.

During this camp Principal Dr. S. R. Walunj told that, not all people are aware of the blood donation facts and hence know very little about the health benefits of blood donation. You may receive material incentives and rewards, inner joy and happiness, but what you receive in addition, is the health benefits. Many people may not desire inner joy or material incentives, and yet they donate blood as they are more health conscious. They are well aware of how donating blood can help them to remain healthy.

There is a reason why the World Health Organization describes blood donation as “the most precious gift anyone can give to another person”: one sample of donated blood can save up to three lives. However, blood donation does not benefit only those who receive the blood. Donors also experience a number of benefits.

Tree Plantation Programme Report: 2014-15

On 3rd July 2014 the tree plantations work done by the NCC Cadets at Nizarneshwar and also in the College campus. On the opening of these Programme Principal Dr. S. R. Walunj shared the information about tree shield children from ultra-violet rays, trees provide food, trees heal, trees reduce violence, trees mark the seasons, trees create economic opportunities, trees are teachers and playmates- Whether as houses for children or creative and spiritual inspiration for adults, trees have provided the space for human retreat throughout the ages. Tree plantings provide an opportunity for community involvement and empowerment that improves the quality of life in our neighborhoods. All cultures, ages, and genders have an important role to play at a tree planting or tree care event. Trees as landmarks can give a neighborhood a new identity and encourage civic pride. Sycamore and oak are among the many urban species that provide excellent urban homes for birds, bees, possums and squirrels. Trees can mask concrete walls or parking lots, and unsightly views. They muffle sound from nearby streets and freeways, and create an eye-soothing canopy of green. Trees absorb dust and wind and reduce glare. In suburban and rural areas, trees can be selectively harvested for fuel and craft wood. The beauty of a well-planted property and its surrounding street and neighborhood can raise property values by as much as 15 percent. Studies show that the more trees and landscaping a business district has, the more business will flow in. A tree-lined street will also slow traffic – enough to allow the drivers to look at the store fronts instead of whizzing by. Trees that are planted to store CO₂ have other benefits: they produce food. Moreover, by preventing erosion they create more land that is suitable to grow food on. In most hot countries people grow food in the shade of trees because sunshine on land without trees would dry out the soil too quickly and scorch the crops. It will stimulate the economic development of poorer countries that suffer from erosion, desertification and food shortages. Trees create their own added value: land that can make money becomes more valuable and can therefore serve as collateral for loans. The trees give small farmers access to the capital market and encourage them to invest in their companies.

Dr. P. M. Dighe told that, People who are content do not move and they commit fewer crimes if they live in small communities with good social relationships. Trees can create these economically sound circumstances and therefore also replace fences and prisons. In fact the global planting of trees is the answer to poverty.

On this occasion 86 NCC Boys and Girls cadets and villagers took actively part in the tree plantation Programme. 105 trees of Coconut and various medicinal plants were planted during this programme. Capt. Sujata Deore and Dr. Anil Wabale get efforts for successful conduction of tree plantation programme.

In which following programmes were conducted.

1. 1st August 2014. On this day the oath of cleanliness were taken by the NCC Cadets.

3. 7th August 2014. On this day meeting was conducted of NCC Unit cadets regarding the cleanliness and information was provided to the volunteers on how to keep our area clean in future. For this programme Principal Dr. S. R. Walunj, Dr. P.M.Dighe, Vice principal and Dr. R.G Rasal were present.

Principal Dr. S. R. Walunj sir guidance to the cadets, Cleanliness is one of the most important practices for a clean and healthy environment. It may be related to public hygiene or personal hygiene. It is essential for everyone to learn about cleanliness, hygiene, sanitation and the various diseases that are caused due to poor maintenance of hygienic conditions. The habits which are learnt or followed at a young age, get embedded into one's personality. One should start to follow certain habits like washing hands before meals, regular brushing of teeth, and bathing from the young age. It is essential to follow certain good practices like keeping our surroundings clean, avoiding littering in public places, refraining from spitting on the road, and many more good habits. Awareness of the Cleanliness and Personal Hygiene is the need of the hour in Our country where the diseases like Dengue fever, swine flu, malaria, chicken fox and jaundice are fast spreading . People should realize the importance of cleanliness and personal hygiene to prevent themselves from these diseases.

Dr. P. M. Dighe told that, Cleanliness meaning is “to keep clean and to avoid dirt”. The practice to clean everything is cleanliness. There are different types of cleanliness, the cleaning of clothes, the cleaning to house; the cleaning of streets, the cleaning of ourselves etc. the most important is to clean ourselves because if we do not care for our cleanliness, we do not bother about the cleaning of surroundings. We feel the importance of cleanliness only when we do practice of cleaning ourselves. The practice of hand washing and bathing is necessary to keep ourselves clean. The person who keeps his self dirty, he also keeps his environment dirty and filthy. So to clean the environment, one should practice cleanliness by his own.
